

Pastor Corey Howse

Senior Pastor, Connection Hill Primitive Baptist Church

Corey S. Howse is a native of Murfreesboro, Tennessee. He was educated in the public schools of Lawrence and Rutherford Counties. He attended Lenoir-Rhyne College, Hickory, North Carolina, Tennessee State University, Nashville, Tennessee, and is a graduate of American Baptist College, Nashville, Tennessee where he majored in Bible and Theology.

An ordained elder, he joined the Progressive Primitive Baptist Church, Murfreesboro, Tennessee at an early age---under the leadership of the late Elder Johnnie E. Taylor. While a member, he served as Sunday School Superintendent, Junior Deacon, Vice President of the Youth Department, and a member of the Youth Choir, Choir Number Two, and the Mass Choir.

He served as the second pastor of the Progressive Primitive Baptist Church from 1994 to 2008. Currently, he is the proud pastor of the Connection Hill Primitive Baptist Church, Thompson Station, Tennessee where he has served as pastor since August 2008.

Elder Howse is a member of the Scholarship Committee of Cumberland Association, Chief Evangelist of the Tri-States Primitive Baptist Convention, an elder of the National Primitive Baptist Convention, USA, a member of the Murfreesboro Storm Water Advisory Committee, and a member of FOCUS.

He is married to the former Kathy D. Smith and they have one son, Stephen.

Presently, he is employed with the Rutherford County School System.
